Press Release: National Payment Corporation Takes Wireless Payroll to Southeastern Educators

Tampa, FL (April 9, 2007) – National Payment Corporation announced today that it is sending delegates to the Southeastern Association of School Business Officials and South Carolina Spring Conference to demonstrate the latest innovations in the wireless payroll industry. National Payment's Web Direct Deposit service, EZStub electronic pay stubs, and employee paycard programs have helped schools across the country save money, time, and critical human resources. By using National Payment's "Keep More Money in Your Schools" program, many Southeastern schools have already reaped the rewards of a "less-paper" approach to their payroll process.

"We investigated and found EZStub to be a terrific idea," said Sam Hurst, Executive Director of Business Services for the Citrus County School Board in Florida. "It piqued our interest because of the cost, and the fact that our staff spends three days stuffing envelopes for each payroll."

Once schools eliminate the expense of creating, printing, and distributing paper checks and pay stubs, they can often save thousands of dollars each year. "By drastically reducing their payroll administration costs, school officials can redirect valuable resources to other areas," said Jim Hagen, National Payment's VP of Sales and Marketing.

The Southeastern Association of School Business Officials (SASBO) is a regional non-profit organization made up of public and nonprofit school personnel from the twelve southeastern states – Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. SASBO's goal is to improve education by supporting the networking and professional development of its school administrators.

Their spring conference will be held from April 23rd through the 26th in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina.
